

Katelyn Rikansrud, owner of Room Remedies, a home redesign service, offers some basic "dos" and "don'ts" for anyone who wants to try and improve a space or room in their own home:

- Don't make the mistake of hanging art too high on the walls. It should be eye level.
- Don't feel that the furniture must be lined up against the walls in a room. Try arrangements with the furniture angled and/or out into the room.
- Do take a look at the lighting in the room. Most people don't have enough light. Try lamps, recessed lighting, uplights and even candles.
- Do add some black in a room. Black accessories can make a room "pop."
- Don't split up paired objects and don't scatter collections around the house.
- Do use area rugs to add softness and color to hard spaces and conversation areas.
- Do play up beautiful architectural features such as fireplaces. They make great focal points.
- Do remember to put your personality into the project. After all, your home is a reflection of you.
