

“This [house] kind of reflects my personality,” says Yvonne. “I thought my granddaughter put it best when I brought her here and it was still pink, and she said, ‘Grandma, it looks like Barbie’s dream house.’ I guess if you look at it, it’s been a doll house for me.” She has spent the last few years contributing just the right pieces and paintings to her doll house.

One has to have a lot of passion for a home like the Mahoney-McGarvey house on Reynolds Street, explains Yvonne, because it takes a lot of work to maintain it. But for now, the Busses are enjoying the close community atmosphere. Restaurants and a marina are within walking distance and the beach is close by.

“We don’t really need all of these bedrooms,” Yvonne says, “but it’s sure fun to share the home with friends and family. It’s not everyone’s typical beach cottage.” ■
